I recommended this app for some of my English students as it's a great way to improve my English. I study French and I love translated dialogues that have many units at the ends. They use native, non-robotic speakers and speak at a natural pace so you can hear the interconnection of words. I also get a visual and how to contextualize all my wonderful cards with sentence examples of words. I have some suggestions for improvement. First, they often will throw 3 to 5 complex rules at you and then you practice them all at once, as if you should have spent all that information at once. I think you should introduce one rule then you practice that one and build on it. Also often there is no audio or translation in many activities and I believe it is a great loss for the student. This is one place where duolingo wins because they are good about it. I would also like more review, so past rules and lessons are worked into new ones. Also not a fan of high sound ding which you can't turn off. Overall very impressed and excited to it. Update: Busuu is my favorite language learning app by far and far outshining duolingo because a more practical language is taught and grammar is not ignored. I'm studying Spanish on it now and wish I had a non-Castilian option because I'm looking to communicate with Mexicans and Latinos who don't use vosotros or that th sound for s. I just have to say bluntly that this app is incredibly effective and beneficial. Regardless of the language you are learning, it will teach you real grammatical concepts and how to use them, which I find remarkable. As far as I know, no other language app on the 'App Store' will teach you the language in this amount of detail. I'm learning Japanese on 'Busuu' and I find it amazingly useful and effective. I've tried a number of language apps to learn Japanese and Japanese-specific apps, and none match the question of perfection and quality that this app brings. I haven't finished the Japanese course yet, but I've tried a few of the last lessons on Japanese of course, and Japanese speaks are actually very advanced, even for English! The dialogue even expects you to know what people in the text are saying, without Rōmaji (Rōmaji is a Latin aid to Japanese words. Example: 'たこ' is 'Tako' in Rōmaji, and 'Tako' means octopus in English.) This application really leads to having an advanced foundation and in some cases I believe it can lead to fluidity! I highly recommend this app and have had so many improvements in my Japanese! This app really makes you want to learn a foreign language and this app makes it easier by give you bite-sized lessons! I really like this app and I look forward to what other amazing things I can say and do in other countries, all from the help of this app! I love how easy it is to use, and how amazing the community is. The lessons are designed very well and the application is very easy to use. Just choose the language you want to learn and let the app take you all the way. It's pretty straight ahead and eventually you'll be familiar and hopefully fluent in any language chosen. I strongly recommend trying out a community feature where you can find people to help you, fix your mistakes, ask for feedback, and even socialize. It's incredibly easy to find people and make friends. I've been using this app for a few days to learn French and I've already learned about 60 words. The only con I can think of is that during the tutorial you are required to listen to the voice saying words and phrases. This could potentially be a problem because sometimes it can be hard to hear what a word or phrase says, especially when it speaks too fast. Besides, everything works like magic. I never write reviews, but I thought I should praise the high quality app that really helped me achieve something. Honestly, it's pretty fun learning a new language even if you're not seriously becoming fluent, and that's where this app really shines... makes it fun and not boring to learn. Anyway, I love this app and I think it's a great tool to pass the time and learn a new language quite easily. App Support Privacy Policy
